BRYDON EAKINS

Senior, University of Washington

Brydon is currently working toward his Bachelor's of Science in Construction Management at the University of Washington. He is the community engagement director for the AGC student chapter, president of the Habitat for Humanity student chapter, is active within the Construction Management program's honor society, and is captain of the heavy-civil team for the ASC Region 7 Student Competition.

Brydon has been interested in construction from a young age, as his grandfather would take him to local construction sites to observe the various parts and pieces. Brydon has had the opportunity to work in both the civil and commercial sectors of the industry through two internships. During the summer of 2015, Brydon served as an intern for KLB Construction while working on the Snoqualmie Pass projects. During the 2015 school year and ensuing 2016 summer, Brydon worked as an intern for Lydig Construction completing tasks on both the Skagit County Jail and Evergreen Health projects.

Brydon is seeking employment as a project engineer or field engineer in the Pacific Northwest, with the opportunity to travel. Upon graduation, he hopes to work for a company with strong cultural values that will provide him the structure to develop and grow into a top project manager. His long-term goal would be to either become a company executive or begin his own construction firm. In his spare time, Brydon enjoys golfing, hiking, refereeing soccer, and snow skiing with family and friends.
