Caleb Vasquez

Senior, University of Washington

Caleb is working toward his Construction Management degree at the University of Washington. He is a member of the student AGC club, and is a volunteer for King County's Habitat for Humanity.

He first became interested in the construction field as a child going to work with his father who owned an excavation and trucking company. He maintained his interest in construction by working during the summer as a laborer doing residential remodels. This past summer, Caleb interned for W.G. Clark Construction as a project engineer.

Caleb hopes to stay in the Seattle area and become a project manager. He hopes to work on projects that will help shape and define the city.
