Lacy Draper

Seattle Central College, Carpentry

Lacy is working toward her Associates of Applied Science Degree at the Seattle Central Wood Technology Center. She is dedicated to opening a fully-equipped woodshop that focuses on sharing knowledge and building skills that she can teach other women interested in construction. Her dream is to have a hammer in every woman's hand.

Lacy comes from a sculpture background and finds power in building and constructing projects with other creative individuals. She believes it is imperative to be mindful of building resources and materials, especially within the building industry, and believes in the importance of raising questions about how decisions affect others, including the environment.

Lacy enjoys hiking and plunging into cold glacial waters.
