Junior, Central Washington University

My name is Jordan Weiberg, and I am working to earn my Bachelor of Science in Construction Management from Central Washington University. I am an avid member of the AGC student chapter, participating in events such as the student golf tournament and buddy-bench building. I am also a member of CWU's Sigma Lambda Chi Construction Management honor society, Phi Kappa Phi honor society, and CWU's Reno Mixed-Use competition team.

Construction has always been a part of my life. During my youth, it was in the form of Tonka Trucks and Legos, and later it manifested in the participation of both the remodel of my childhood home and the state SkillsUSA competition in high school.

My goal at CWU is to accumulate and build my construction experience with as many opportunities from the Construction Management program as possible. In addition to my studies, I've spent my college summers as a laborer for Quigg Brothers Inc., a local civil contractor. This summer, I am interning with Shimmick Construction on the Denny Network Project in downtown Seattle. I am hoping to begin working toward a career as a project manager at a heavy civil construction firm located in the greater Seattle area after graduation.

In my spare time, I enjoy hiking, playing ultimate frisbee, golfing, gardening, and woodworking.
