Brandon Bradley

Senior, Central Washington University

My name is Brandon Bradley and I am a senior working toward my construction management degree while earning a minor in safety and health management at Central Washington University. I am secretary of the Mechanical Contractors Association (MCA) student chapter and a member of the AGC student chapter. I am also the captain of the ASC 2020 Reno competition team.

Since I was five years old, I have been fascinated with construction. As a child, I would go to work with my father and help on job sites. When I started my journey at CWU in 2015, choosing construction management was an easy decision. I wanted to learn even more about the industry, so I decided to pursue a safety and health minor as well.

In the school year of 2017 and 2018 I worked for Centennial. As a team, we earned the AGC Build Washington Award for Construction Excellence. This summer I began my journey at Andersen Construction, and I plan to sign with them after graduation. I am currently working on a 40-story high-rise residential building known as the Emerald of Seattle.

My long-term goal is to start at the bottom and work myself up to CEO of a company. In my spare time, I enjoy working on cars, golfing, fishing, and spending time with my friends and family.
