Daniel Litchfield

Senior, Washington State University

My name is Daniel Litchfield and I am a senior in the construction management program at Washington State University. I am the current president of WSU's Associated Students of Construction Management (ASCM) student group and vice president and assistant captain of the WSU Men's ice hockey team. I am also involved with the ASC competition teams.

I have always strived to try my hardest in all pursuits. Whether it's being president of ASCM or doing projects in estimating, I always push myself to learn from challenges and apply this knowledge to my future career in the construction industry.

From playing with Legos as a child to building decks, patios, and pergolas for family and friends, construction is something I've always believed I was meant to do. Construction has continued to spark my interest and drive my passion for improving myself and connecting with the students in my program.
