McKay Permann

Senior, Central Washington University

My name is McKay Permann and I am pursuing a bachelor's degree in construction management at Central Washington University.

My interest in construction began at a young age. My uncle owns his own construction company and I have always been inspired by having a rewarding job such as his. When I graduated high school, I chased many different career paths. However, during the summers I would always work different construction jobs. I am familiar with carpentry, flooring, concrete and asphalt, pumps and water systems, construction material suppliers, and excavation. After being introduced to heavy machinery and working my way up to an operator position, I fell in love with the idea of being around heavy equipment every day.

I am currently interning with TTC Construction Inc. in Yakima, WA. I have been helping with estimating and takeoffs using Heavy Bid and Insight digitizing software. I find becoming familiar with computer programs and technology in an ever-evolving construction world to be extremely important. I have worked hard since a young age to have a mechanically advanced skill set.

In my spare time I really enjoy riding and racing dirt bikes. I have built a side business of working on powersports for others through this passion.
